Chairman's foreword

Keeping a long-term perspective in uncertain and troubled times

For people, businesses and society, 2020 has been a year like no other. As the Covid-19 crisis hit, we all experienced something no risk management system could ever have anticipated. Faced with this situation, we continued to serve our clients and deliver on our mission, while maintaining a long-term perspective by continuing to invest in and look to the future.

The human and economic consequences of the crisis are already devastating, and we certainly have not seen the end of it yet.

In such circumstances, financial matters clearly had to take a back seat to the absolute imperatives of protecting our people and making sure we did everything to ensure their health and safety.

My thoughts primarily go out to all the Mazarians whose lives have been made very difficult over the last few months. I also want to express my heartfelt thanks to our teams. They showed exceptional resilience and dedication throughout the crisis and must be sincerely commended for their commitment to ensuring business continuity, while taking care of their loved ones.

Our people's remarkable efforts to continue serving our clients, help them during this crisis and carry out their assignments enabled us to do more than just weather the storm. We recorded strong achievements in 2020: we won three new major audit mandates for CAC 40 companies in France, made significant inroads with PIEs in the UK, strengthened the Mazars North America Alliance operations and reinforced our regional capabilities and footprint. Considering these successes, we are confident we have reached a strong position on the world scene.

This is precisely what our new brand identity is about: it reflects how much we have transformed, without ever compromising our culture, our values and the uniqueness of our model, and how poised we are to further grow and create value for the benefit of all our stakeholders.

In such uncertain and troubled times, we are convinced long-term thinking is critical. Which is why we have designed our strategic plan for the next four years, with the objectives of accelerating our transformation and anchoring Mazars as an international leader. We want to continuously improve the way we serve our clients and develop our talent. We take pride in empowering our people, clients and industry to achieve their potential and do the right thing and strive to provide answers and experiences that are the right fit for them.

We are determined to help build a more vibrant, dynamic and competitive audit market, along with all concerned parties, to create the conditions for healthier and fairer businesses, financial markets and societies.

This is our purpose, and these are our promises. We will not waver from them.

Responding to the Covid-19 crisis

For people, businesses and society, 2020 was a year like no other. With the global Covid-19 pandemic, many have faced extreme challenges; people and families across the world have lost loved ones too early and suffered previously unthinkable restrictions to their lives and livelihoods as governments, companies and other institutions battled to contain the virus. The unique challenge for business has been how to respect the necessity to preserve life while fulfilling its duty to meet society's needs in a financially sustainable way.

Responding to the Covid-19 crisis Safeguarding our people

As soon as the Covid-19 outbreak started impacting our offices and stringent health measures were announced around the world, we set ourselves the priority of keeping our people safe and healthy and providing them with the flexibility to take care of themselves and their families.

Within 48 hours, we were able to implement business continuity plans and strengthen the technology infrastructure in all our countries. This enabled us to quickly close our offices wherever needed and have most of our staff work from home.

Our global and local HR teams developed a coordinated response, by hosting webinars and producing a series of hands-on guides on a variety of topics, such as successfully transitioning to working remotely, how to best manage a workforce under lockdown conditions, coping with the crisis, and, at a later stage and where applicable, how to progressively return to an office environment.

Reinforcing communications and team connectivity

As people were asked to stay at home and direct interactions halted, we lay particular emphasis on keeping our communications channels open, in order to maintain the link between our teams and our organisation. Beyond the traditional collaborative tools used by all our staff to work together around the world, our group-wide app, Mazars live, was used on a regular basis by our CEO and top-management to provide information and updates to all our people. We also created an internal web TV and organised virtual conferences and live sessions with all our staff.

team members from 25+ countries shared their views to help us shape new ways of working.

Widening access to online training

We believe education is key and were determined to maintain our training efforts despite lockdown measures and the impossibility of holding physical sessions. So, we comprehensively moved to online training and made sure all our people were provided access to platforms such as LinkedIn Learning.

As a result, each of our audit staff underwent over 54 hours of training on average and 90% of people throughout our partnership followed at least one training session in 2020.

We do not believe in “stop-go” policies and have continued to recruit steadily during the crisis. Even though most physical career fairs were cancelled, our offices around the world were able to find ingenious ways to host virtual events that enabled us to maintain the relationships we had built with candidates, universities, schools and other talent pools.

Reflecting on new ways of working

Some of the Covid-19-induced adaptations will certainly remain when the pandemic is over. We strongly believe the increased level of flexibility that has been imposed on us is here to stay and will entail new approaches to management, with remote leadership becoming a key skill in the years to come. We reflected on such topics through a series of podcasts we produced over the last few months, under the name “Modern Feedback.” We also surveyed our people and held focus groups to understand their needs and enable us to best transform the office experience in the future.

“Our response to the crisis in terms of protecting our people is truly how our 2020 performance should be measured.”

“We created the Covid-19: Mazars Global Resource Centre to stay close to our clients, help them navigate the crisis and rise to the new challenges we all currently face.”

Responding to the Covid-19 crisis Maintaining high quality services and support to our clients

In the midst of a pandemic that has caused uncertainty and forced businesses to sometimes take harsh measures, we have remained by our clients' sides, sharing advice and tools to navigate the crisis, and ensuring business continuity and service.

To help our clients navigate the crisis we launched our Reshape programme, which guides an organisation through assessing their situation and operational business impact and then combines this with scenario planning and financial forecasting to make informed decisions on the priority areas to focus on.

We also created the free to access Covid-19: Mazars Global Resource Centre, designed as a dedicated hub with interactive tools, insights and access to an international taskforce of Mazars experts.

Within the framework of our Global Resource Centre, we opened a Covid-19 helpline, through which our clients could discuss any business, tax, legal or technical questions and be connected with the right Mazars expert, wherever in the world they operate.

Our Global Tax and Law Tracker

Also part of our Global Resource Centre, the Covid-19 Global Tax and Law Tracker is an interactive tool that draws on the skills, expertise and experience of Mazars' tax and legal experts from 75 countries and helps business leaders understand the Covid-19 legislation and tax measures that impact them and their business, anywhere in the world.

Mazars' Global Tax and Law Tracker enables clients to select the countries, legislation and tax measures they want to know about, providing them with immediate access to the information that is most relevant to them.

Our Covid-19 expert insights

Our Covid-19 insights series provides clients with the views and expertise of our teams on a wide range of topics, from business continuity and the economic impact of the crisis, to people, sector-specific insights and technology. With these insights we aim to help our clients better understand the new working world, deal with today's situation and plan for the future.

Our global rebranding

We are proud to introduce you to Mazars' new brand identity. As we have evolved, grown and developed into a truly international partnership with worldwide operations, while still cherishing our unique integrated model and distinctive approach, it was time to better reflect what we've become, strongly state who we are and the promise we make to all our stakeholders and reaffirm our purpose.

Our global rebranding Reflecting what we have become

More than ever, we take pride in empowering our people, clients and industry to achieve their potential and do the right thing. Combining our expertise, agility and understanding we provide answers and experiences that are the right fit for them.

Mazars was founded in 1945 and has, for 75 years, operated as one team, with the very same guiding values and principles: to act responsibly, cultivate high quality teams, deliver bespoke solutions to clients and manage our firm in an integrated way for the benefit of future generations.

This hasn't changed, and it certainly will not, but much has: from our humble beginnings in Western France, we have grown to become a truly international organisation. In the past ten years we have doubled in size and are now present in more than 90 countries and territories worldwide. We have developed and enriched our offerings, enlarged our client-base and diversified our talent, to meet the new expectations of businesses and society. We have taken on new challenges and made the most of new opportunities, for the benefit of our clients, our people and our communities. Through innovation and an entrepreneurial spirit, we have explored new territories, reinforced our capabilities and fully embraced the digital universe.

2020 was the time to reflect those changes and rearticulate the promise that we make to our clients, people and society.

We want our brand to truly represent the firm we are today and strive to be in the future.

Our global rebranding Clearly stating who we are

Our new brand identity clearly defines who we are: an international and multicultural audit, tax and advisory firm, built as an integrated partnership, working as one team and committed to helping its people and clients succeed, providing confidence and acting in the public interest.

We do this by understanding who they are and how they work and adapting our approach accordingly. We pride ourselves in providing high quality services, by combining the scale and resources of a large multinational organisation and the agility and creativity of a human-and client-centric firm, that celebrates entrepreneurial spirit, independence of thought, expertise and collective intelligence.

“We adopted a truly collaborative approach: thousands of our people passionately contributed to help us define our positioning of being the right, trusted partner”

Cécile Kossoff
Chief Brand, Marketing
& Communications Officer

Our global rebranding Reaffirming our purpose and our promise

We are committed to helping build the economic foundations of a fair and prosperous world by caring for the success of our people and clients, the health of financial markets, and the integrity of our industry.

We want to help our clients and people achieve their full potential and do the right thing, because we are convinced that healthy businesses and markets, and a more dynamic, vibrant and diversified audit and consulting industry, will ultimately make the world a better place for all.

To our clients we promise to go beyond the immediate challenge and find the answer that works best for them and their business. And we do that with an approach that respects who they are and how they work.

For our people we promise to be a firm that celebrates their individuality and empowers them to become the expert practitioners and leaders they want to be.

And for our investors, markets, regulators and society at large we promise that we will always seek to do what is right, approaching every task with independence, accountability and a social conscience.

Bringing our brand to life: our new logo and visual identity

We have designed our new logo to be instantly recognisable and uniquely Mazars. It is a confident, understated wordmark, that is free of symbols and taglines, with curves that reflect the blend and balance of human and technology in our approach, as well as our agility and lightness of foot. The blue tones are a nod to our heritage. Our visual identity reflects how we work, collaboratively, and the relentless focus that we put on our clients and people. Our images all have a depth of field and precise focal points or bring different perspectives on the world. Our entire visual design mirrors our promise to be the right fit for those we serve.

We are confident we can keep our promise to all our stakeholders as we bring four essential attributes to each of them.

Empowered expertise: We empower our professionals with the technical skills, ethics and independence of thought to provide an exceptional service and do what is right for our clients and the public interest.

A balanced perspective: As an international and multicultural partnership, we are uniquely able to blend local and global perspectives. We combine the deeply rooted cultural awareness and understanding of our local teams and the global resources of our partnership to provide thoughtful counsel to clients of all sizes wherever they operate. We cherish our diversity of thought and balanced world view.

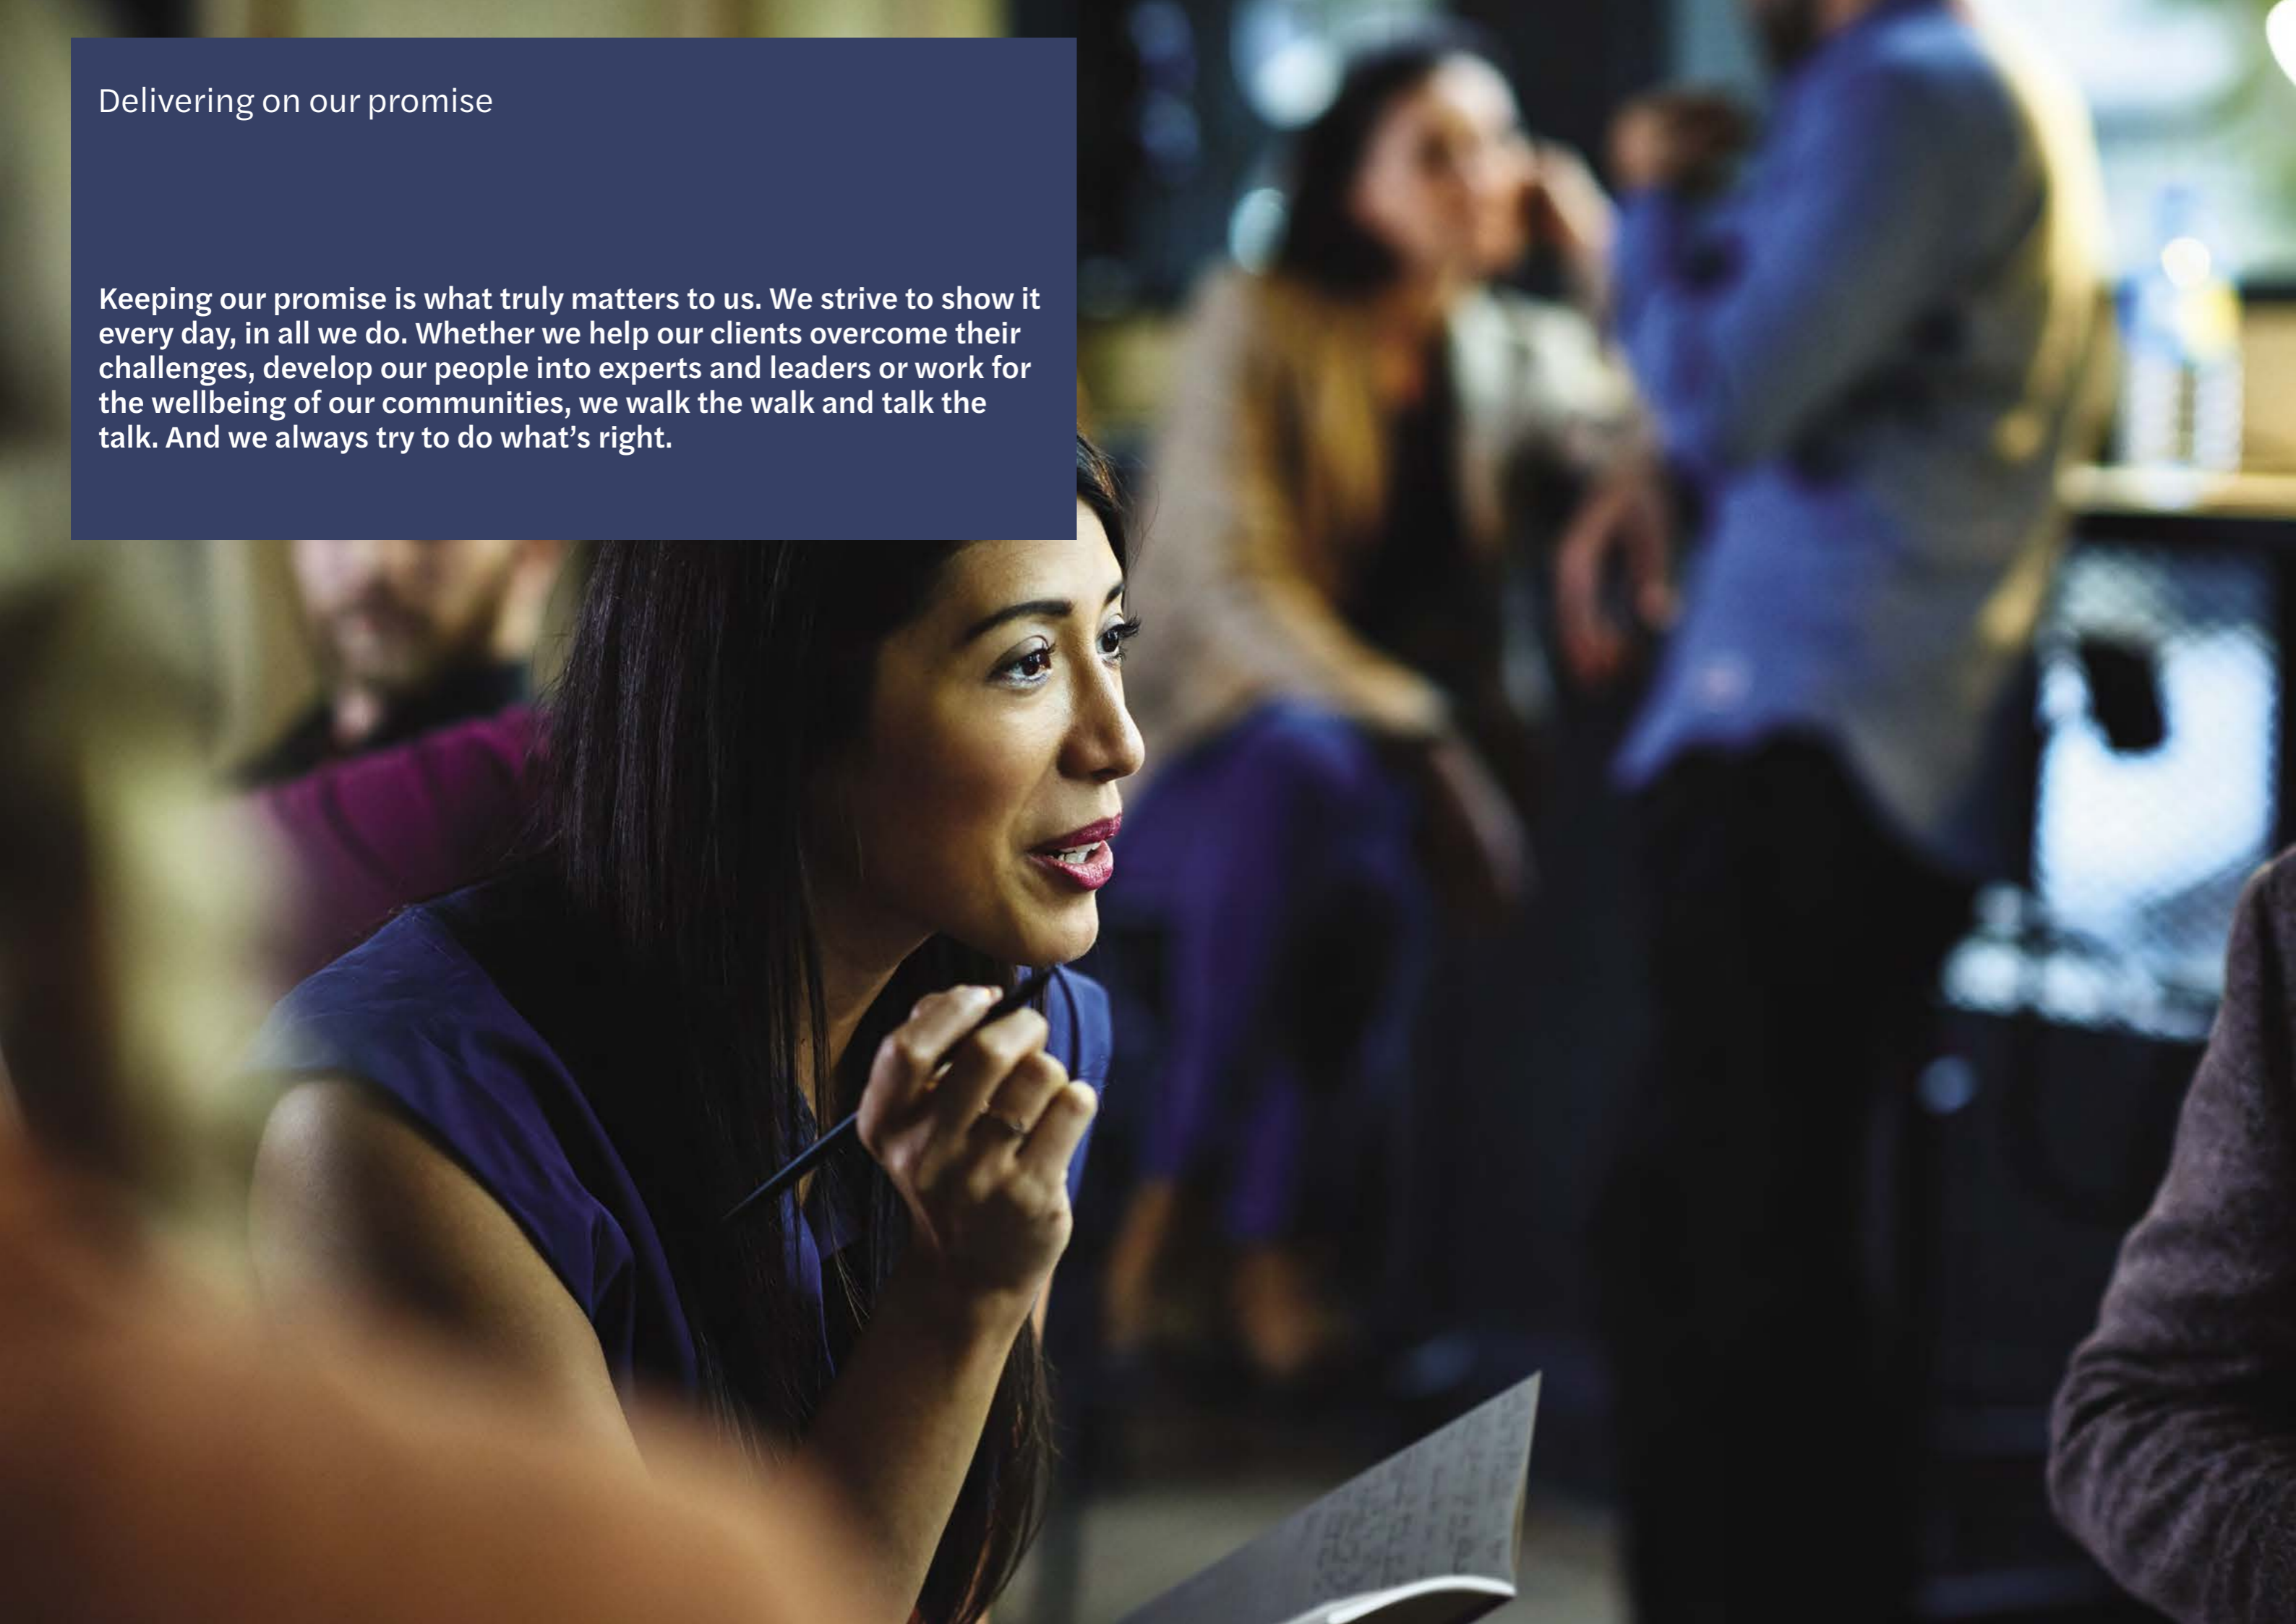

Seamless integration: We operate around the world as one single united and connected integrated partnership with aligned interests, shared values and consistent models and standards. We deliver a rewarding experience and the same high level of quality wherever we work.

Social conscience: We pride ourselves in giving clients, investors, markets, regulators and the public at large confidence that what we do is right for them and for society. We strongly believe in accountability and take responsibility for our actions. We do not focus on short-term achievements; we manage our firm for the benefit of future generations. Our social conscience is the reason why we remain independent and the pillar of our ambition to bring choice to our industry.

Delivering on our promise

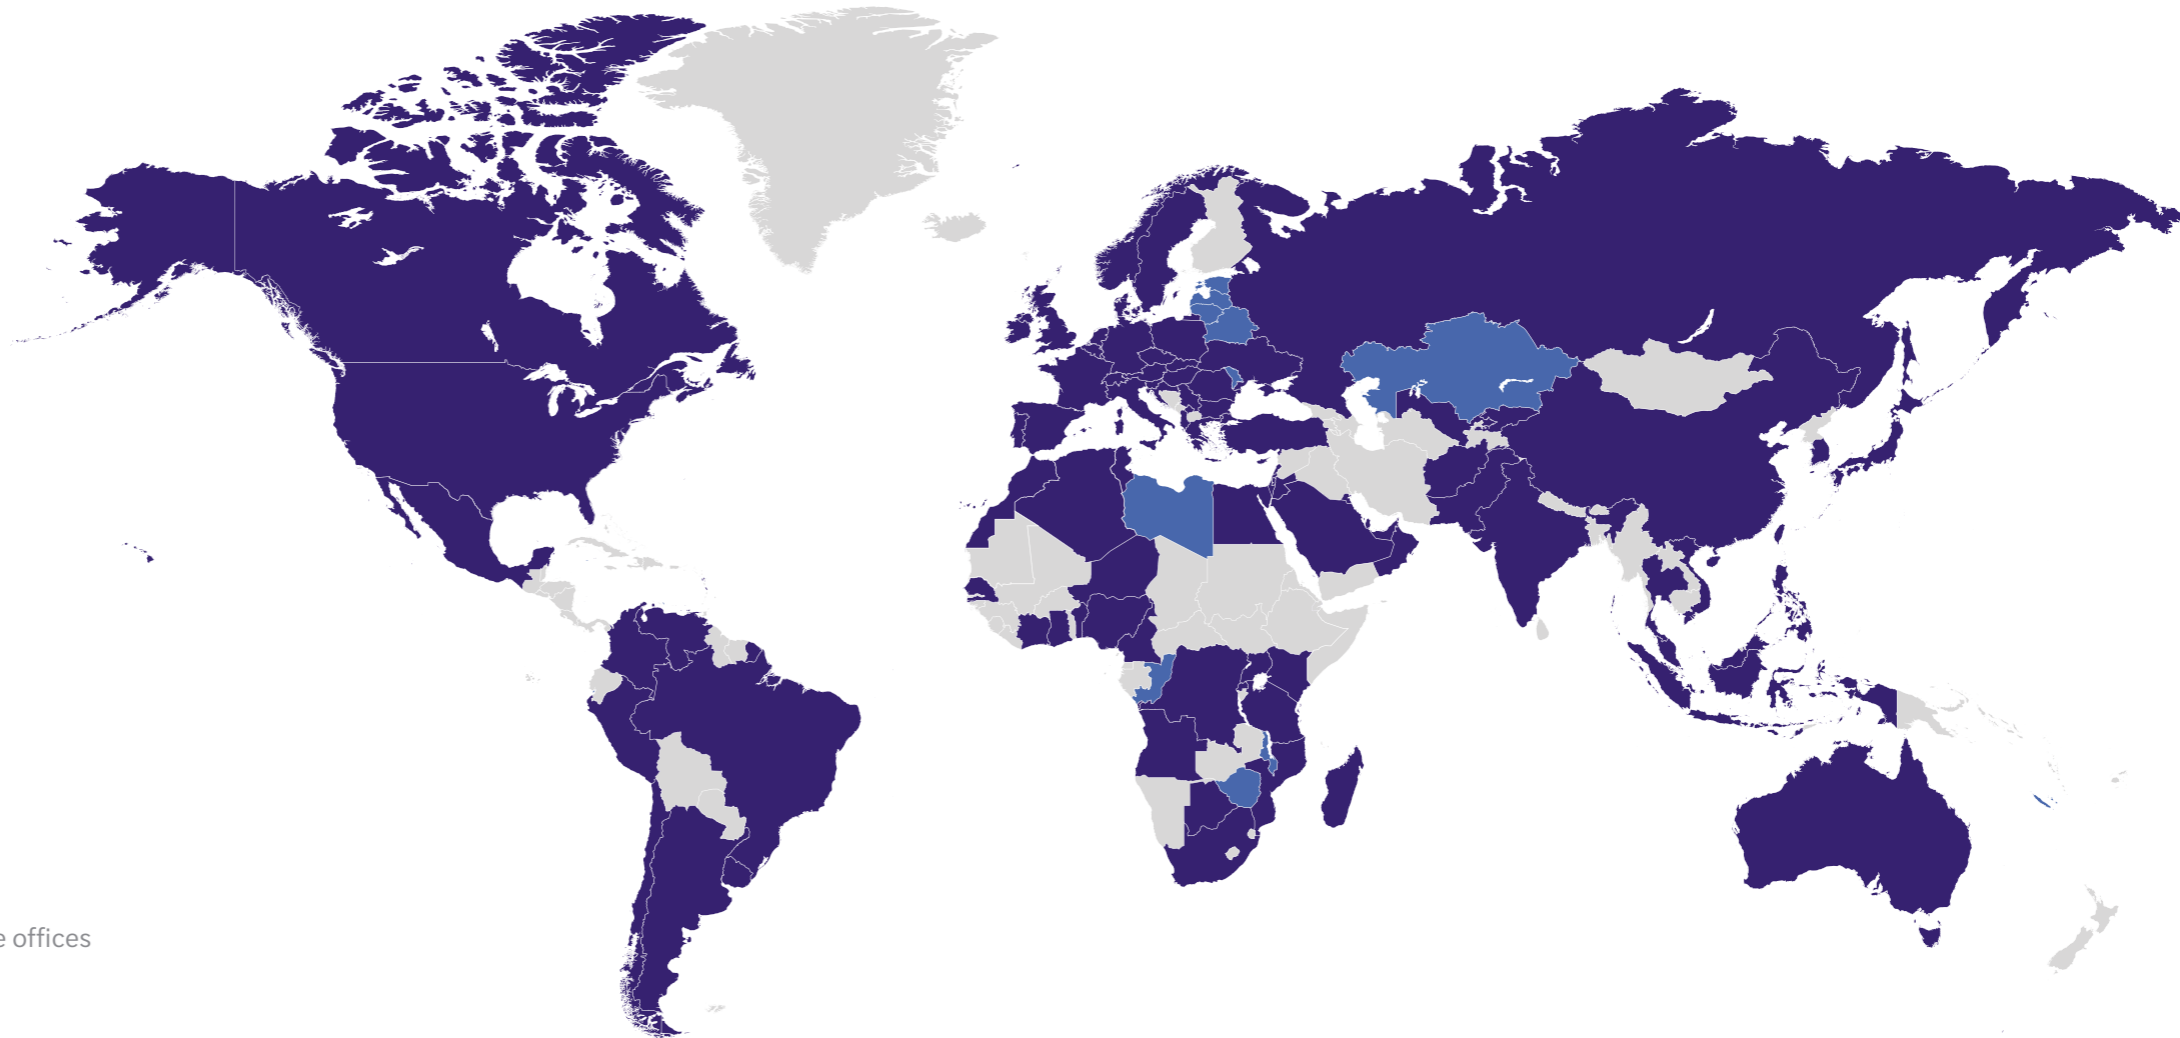

Keeping our promise is what truly matters to us. We strive to show it every day, in all we do. Whether we help our clients overcome their challenges, develop our people into experts and leaders or work for the wellbeing of our communities, we walk the walk and talk the talk. And we always try to do what's right.

Delivering on our promise
Serving our clients

We see insights and thought leadership as an integral part of the expertise and balanced perspective we bring to the market. Through our publications, we share our views on the future of industry sectors and our profession and its role in building a fair and prosperous world, discussing major changes that will impact the lives and business models of our clients, and key trends that will reshape our societies.

We invest in research and knowledge partnerships to shape and advance the debate on key topics that matter for our economy and society, such as climate change, gender diversity and business sustainability.

We engage experts and thought leaders in critical conversations on how trends impact businesses.

Delivering on our promise Empowering our people

We operate in a highly competitive and talent-driven industry. We take pride in enabling our people to learn, develop and thrive in a working environment that rewards boldness, promotes open cooperation and recognises diversity as a genuine source of value creation.

Making Mazars a school of excellence

We are a professional business school offering life-long development opportunities. We consider education to be the key to our commitment to quality, sustainable development and ability to keep our promise of employability to all our talent.

The Mazars University, founded in 2008, first received the CLIP accreditation in 2015 and was accredited for a second time running in 2020. Since its creation, it has acted as the hub for high quality learning materials and practices across the firm, mostly in the areas of soft skills, digital skills and leadership skills. We are aiming to go one step further, by integrating technical training within Mazars University, to offer high-quality and certifying global programmes to all our people wherever they are in the world. Recently we started opening our university to external students, continuing our quest to add value to society.

We also innovated in the area of executive education, with the creation of “TheNextMBA”, which is an executive MBA on cutting-edge business topics ranging from client-centric marketing to digital disruption, talent management and sustainable strategy. It is open to both Mazars partners and participants from other organisations. Most of the international leaders that today sit on Mazars’ Group Executive Board are graduates of TheNextMBA.

Celebrating entrepreneurial spirit and innovation

We celebrate the individuality and leadership of our people and encourage them to dare and be bold. We are entrepreneurs at heart and are not afraid to innovate and explore uncharted territories.

As Mazars grew into the international firm it has become, we were able to rely on leaders who showed vision, pioneering spirit and the absolute certainty that technical expertise was of the essence. Based on our common values, management principles and a fulfilling work environment, our ambition is to: recruit high potential individuals; prepare our talent to meet the market’s evolving needs; and offer attractive career opportunities, including international experience. This is the key to our ability to deliver personalised services of exceptional quality to every client, build long-term relationships with each of them and help them achieve their long-term ambitions.

Our corporate culture

Our unique corporate culture is one of technical expertise, accountability, integrity, independence, stewardship and creating the best work environment for all our people. Our distinctive one-team approach makes Mazars a truly human and international adventure, where we give our talent the best opportunities to connect with their peers and learn from internal coaches and mentors. We strive to offer true work-life balance and we engage all our people to speak up and build the future of work with us.

“As the first employer of thousands of fresh graduates, we take management education seriously, as many of them will progress to executive roles across all types of industries.”

Laurent Choain
Group Chief People Officer

Fostering diversity and inclusion

Diversity is a unifying value at Mazars and a key factor in the success of our strategy. We value diversity and do not tolerate discrimination in any form. Everyone has a place at Mazars, regardless of gender, ethnicity, age, ability, sexual orientation, religion, geographical, social or cultural origin. Over the last few years, we have focused on increasing the representation of women in leadership positions and have made significant progress towards this objective.

A lot has been done, but we want to accelerate the process further. To this effect, our four-year strategic plan, One24, contains a new set of incentives and binding measures, to help us achieve greater gender diversity and increase the number of women in our international partnership and our wider talent list.

Delivering on our promise Our social conscience in action

We make a promise to our stakeholders – clients, investors, markets, regulators and the public – to always seek to do what is right, approaching every task with integrity, independence, accountability and a social conscience.

True to our founders' values

We have always remained true to our founders' values and approach every task with the integrity, independence, accountability and social conscience we have inherited from them. We owe them our deep commitment to ethics and strong belief that technical excellence is the key to our success.

These values and principles have guided us ever since in everything we do; in how we serve and meet the needs of our clients, how we develop and nurture our talent and how we relate to our communities. They have been the pillars of our growth: the people we recruit and the firms we merge with all share our values, vision and objectives.

Our values and principles are at the heart of our global Code of Conduct, which clearly states who we are, what we expect from our people and how we deal with our clients, stakeholders and communities at large. We have developed training modules on our Code of Conduct and on ethics and independence, which are mandatory for all our staff.

Our values

Stewardship

Deeply committed to quality, integrity and independence

Quality, integrity, independence and objectivity are cardinal principles in our profession. We make sure our quality management processes and tools are solid and exemplary and enable us to go beyond simple compliance.

Our Quality Management Board defines the quality monitoring system and the relevant procedures that are required to be implemented across all service lines and countries and monitors their implementation, with the objective to further embed quality and ethics into who we are. We have significantly reinforced our quality management processes over recent years, with the creation of fully-fledged regional Quality Management leader positions in the regions, in line with the establishment of strong regional platforms within our partnership.

In order to ensure our independence, we have developed WeCheck, a global tool designed as a one-stop-shop, with a view to protecting our independence throughout our partnership. All countries are now using it, and 68 of them, representing more than 90% of our turnover, regularly upload and refresh their client data into the WeCheck data management system. Some 85% of requests are now processed in 48 hours or less.

As stated in the Mazars Integrated Transparency Report published on our website, independent audit oversight is in place in 62 countries of the Mazars integrated partnership, and 23 countries were subject to regulatory inspections in 2019. Internationally, 91% of the independent oversight reports were satisfactory, with some areas of improvement, over the past two years.

Aiming to build a healthy audit industry

We believe the audit market is in need of reform. The Wirecard case follows earlier large-scale corporate failures and has deepened an existing crisis of trust in the audit sector. Policy makers, investors, credit institutions and the general public have voiced doubts on the ability of auditors to provide the necessary assurance on the true state of companies' financial health. Audit also needs to adapt to technological innovations and changing customer requirements. As a true international player that brings choice, we see it as our duty to contribute to a much-needed change and help build a fairer, more diverse audit market.

We are convinced a better functioning and more resilient audit market will greatly help improve economic robustness and would rest on several key pillars: the implementation of rigorous quality, ethics and risk management processes, the generalisation of joint audits for major companies, a thorough assessment of the impact of technology and AI on audit processes, and a global conversation involving all stakeholders on what audit truly stands for, what is expected of auditors in today's and tomorrow's world, and how we can empower them to meet these expectations.

These changes will require transformation across the audit profession. Through continuous investment in our teams and in technology we are clearly prepared to take up the challenge.

In 2020 we commissioned a global audit survey to understand chief finance officers' and audit committee chairs' expectations and needs towards audit, and their thoughts about the future of audit. It confirmed the imperative to rethink the audit profession and give it the means to fully play its role in building a fair and sustainable economy.

This is precisely why we strive to provide augmented audits, that deliver more consistency, more efficiency, more value and an increased social impact. We want to make each of our audits unique, by delivering insight, promoting transparency, providing constructive challenge, enhancing trust in how organisations report to their stakeholders, and ultimately helping future-proof the businesses we audit.

Delivering on our promise Our social conscience in action

We have always managed our firm for the benefit of future generations; and our CSR strategy focuses on putting quality, people, sustainability and social impact at the centre of our business strategy, in line with our purpose and values.

Caring for our communities

We care for societies and ecosystems and are determined to give back to our communities. We do not see this as a peripheral or ancillary matter, but as something which is right and will help us further improve and grow as an organisation.

Providing pro-bono advice to the Baan Dek Foundation in Thailand

During lockdown, Mazars in Thailand provided pro-bono advice on finance and accounting practices for the Baan Dek Foundation (BDF), which is part of the Kids Home Development Network, a Thai-registered foundation dedicated to helping children in need by improving their physical, psychological, affective and social well-being, and thus enabling them to become autonomous and responsible adults.

The assignment was handled by Punrada Lert and Pattarathida Janrawangyot from Mazars' local AOS practice, and involved reviewing the overall finance and accounting practices, structure of the foundation's budget, and tools available to improve the foundation's financial capacities.

We encourage our professionals to engage in pro-bono activities and provide support, expertise or free-of-charge services to exemplary not-for-profits, charities or think-tanks.

Working together with the Gender Balance Observatory

In France, Mazars is partnering with the Gender Balance Observatory to advance female leadership and representation in top management. The Gender Balance Observatory brings together recognised experts in the field of gender diversity and companies committed to the subject, as well as a group of CEOs who discuss, work and advocate for increasing gender balance and equity in corporations. The Gender Balance Observatory, with all of its members, has defined and published a collection of six measures that have proven effective in accelerating gender diversity in businesses. Working with the Observatory members, Mazars has developed a checklist for CEOs to assess whether their organisations have put in place the actions. This checklist will be published in the 2021 edition of the Green Book.

Demonstrating and reporting on sustainability

Long-term thinking, planning and development have always been an integral part of who we are. Our history is one of sustainable growth and continued stewardship. Above all, we want to keep that long-term perspective and prepare for a seamless transmission to future generations of leaders.

We see our global corporate social responsibility as a natural development of our global commitment to sustainability and to the creation of shared value, for all our stakeholders.

With this in mind, we have developed a global CSR strategy, which rests on five strategic pillars: integrity & responsibility, people, climate & environment, sustainability services and community. Through these five pillars, we believe we can contribute to the advancement of eight of the 17 UN Sustainable Development Goals:

- Good health and well-being
- Quality education
- Gender equality
- Decent work & economic growth
- Industry, innovation & infrastructure
- Responsible consumption and production
- Climate action
- Peace, justice and strong institutions

Our CSR objectives, initiatives and key performance indicators are prominently featured in our global Sustainability Report, which we published for the first time in 2020. The next edition will be published in 2021.

Local and national CSR reporting is available as well, as 23 countries within our partnership also publish their own Sustainability Reports. A growing number of them have initiated CSR-certification processes, such as ISO 14001 or B Corp.

A renewed governance

Despite the crisis, Mazars continued to invest and plan for its future. In December 2020, our partners voted to approve the new strategic plan, which articulates the roadmap for the next four years, as well as a renewed governance structure to support its implementation.

Interview with Tim Hudson, Chairman of the Group Governance Council

As Chairman of the Group Governance Council (GGC), Tim Hudson shares his thoughts on how Mazars responded to the Covid-19 crisis and was able to show solidarity and resilience. He also weighs in on the Group's ambitions for the next four years.

2020 marks the end of your second term as Chair of the GGC. Can you give us a global overview of the last four years?

This has been a period of substantial progress for the Group and for governance within the Group. There has been strong growth and financial performance – at least up until the Covid pandemic, we have continued to improve our geographical coverage and we have continued to win significant assignments, both audit and non-audit, with prestigious global clients as well as local domestic champions. We have renewed our core governance documents, and working constructively with the GEB we have seen real and consistent progress on a number of key topics, including risk management, diversity and inclusion and the successful launch of the new brand which encapsulates much of the sustained culture of the Group.

This has been a year like no other. How would you characterise Mazars' overall response to the Covid-19 crisis?

I think we can be very proud of the way in which we have weathered the storm so far. We responded with speed and with the primary focus on the safety and protection of all Mazarians. With the almost immediate switch to remote working we could stay focused on our clients. Our team spirit feels stronger than ever; the way our teams across the globe have supported our clients and each other has been impressive.

In such a complicated environment, how would you rate Mazars' performance and what does it say about the resilience of Mazars' model?

Resilience has been a key word. Although our growth was halted for a period in the first half of 2020 we have still achieved growth of around 7% in our financial year to 31 August. With voting to appoint 76 new partners with effect from 1 September we see that we remain committed to investing and ensuring the long-term growth and development of the Group.

The Covid-19 crisis has put systemic risks in the spotlight. How would you assess Mazars' level of preparation to deal with such risks?

We had done some scenario planning for crisis management within the Group but like most global organisations we were not fully prepared for the breadth and depth of this pandemic. However, now with a degree of hindsight, it is clear that our structures and relatively short lines of communication between the GEB, country executives and our teams enabled us to have a consistent and proportionate response in all 90 countries. I think this shows the strength of our structures.

"Our team spirit feels stronger than ever"

In 2019, Mazars created the Mazars North America Alliance to increase its ability to answer large international tenders. After one year of operations, has this strategic move started to deliver what was expected?

Again, given the context of the last 12 months, with significant hindrance to travel and face to face meetings, the Alliance has had a solid first year. The US teams are working well together and our clients and prospects have responded positively to the enhanced strength and coverage that the Alliance provides.

Mazars is starting a new phase in its development, with a four-year strategic programme, called One24. What are the main objectives set for the coming years and where do you see Mazars four years from now?

We have a four-year cycle for the renewal of our governance bodies. More than 150 partners have participated in the strategic reflection that has resulted in the One24 strategic plan. This will not see a radical shift of direction but as we see challenges and opportunities from the rapidly changing regulatory landscape in audit, not just in Europe, and the increasing digitisation of services we have re-examined our priorities. We will remain focused on our clients and continue to modernise our services and service delivery. This will require an increased pace of investment in both people and infrastructure whilst ensuring we do everything in a sustainable way.
